Booklet #5

Connections,
conclusions and cash
transfers.

We know you've been doing a lot of surveys, and we really appreciate it! You may have noticed, however, that none of them are really asking you to share your ideas and opinions.

Your perspective is important.

How you feel about the systems around you, what's worked for you, the ways institutions have helped you or made your life harder...that is all really, really important stuff. In order to advocate for a system that actually works, we need your input.

This booklet is optional!

It's an opportunity for you to help us see what we are missing and be a part of something very big (we hope!).

Have a look at the consent info at the back if you are okay with us using your answers here to try and make the world a better place. If you would rather keep your responses private, that's okay too!

Oh hey, we almost forgot to ask...

How did you use the $8500?

(You can draw your own pie chart or just list the things you spent it on, whatever works for you!)

The first thing I did with the money was:

What was going on in your life when you found out you were going to get the $8500?

What things were you were worried about?

How did you feel about your life in general?

Did you use it the way you expected/planned to?

Why or why not?
What happened?

These are some quotes from people who received cash transfers in the previous study we did.

What do you think of them?

Which ones capture YOUR experience?

Circle one of the faces next to the quotes that matches how you feel about each of them.

agree = green :D; disagree = red >:(

If you really like or dislike one, please write some comments nearby to explain how you feel.

Getting the cash was like being in the water and someone throwing you a life jacket.

You're going to take it right?

So that's what that was to me, it was like being resuscitated.

"The cash helped me out a bit but with the cost of living, it's actually not that much anymore"

"The cash transfer was kind of like a stepping stone. I've used that as a starter, to get everything kind of situated."

"I could've made it without it, but it would've been a really slow process, so it was a good kick start."

"Yeah, I mean the cash helped me for a bit but it didn't make huge any changes in my life"

"I kind of wished I could have got it in installments, not all at once, that was kind of overwhelming for me"

In your opinion, what is the difference between...

You, a year ago

You now

Your past

Your future

Do you think unconditional cash transfers could help more people get out of homelessness?

Why, or why not?

Is there anything else about the cash transfer experience that you'd like to share with us?

Can we use your name to give you credit for your ideas if we end up sharing the answers you've provided?

No, I want to be 100% anonymous!

Yes, use this name:

Would you like to be notified about how we use your answers, if they are published or otherwise shared?

No, I don't care.

Yes, notify me! (add your contact info below!)

Can we contact you if we have questions, or there are other opportunities for you to share your perspective?

No thanks.

Sure, I enjoyed this! (add contact info below!)

CONTACT INFO (OPTIONAL):

We can bring your knowledge and insight to a bigger audience.

Your input can help people understand what we need to do to better support everyone in our community. It can be shared with decision makers and leaders to make sure they see how policies affect real people. It can guide our future research. It can help us in our efforts to advocate for change and help us explain to people we rely on for funding exactly what is needed on the ground and why research into innovative solutions is important.

It's up to you.

Tell us what you want us to do with your answers:

- ☐ Use them to help guide FSC's future research projects
- ☐ Use them in communications to the people who fund our work
- ☐ Use them to support FSC's political/social advocacy campaigns
- ☐ Use them to show the impact of and need for FSC's work
- ☐ Do NOT use my responses for anything, just read them
